Docuflow appointed to Government G-Cloud 11 Framework to provide cloud software services on the Digital Marketplace

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE 01.7.2019

Docuflow are pleased to announce they have been appointed to the UK Government G-Cloud 11 – RM1557.11 Framework after a rigorous tender process managed by Crown Commercial Services.

Docuflow will be a partner to deliver internet accessed and cloud-based software solutions as the UK Government transitions from printed documents and time consuming and expensive associated processes.

The framework agreement enables Docuflow to be a recognised partner to the UK Government, associated organisations and departments of solutions to include data capture, document and content management software, artificial intelligence software, hybrid mail software and a whole host of cloud-based services to streamline Government workflows.

The Docuflow supplier agreement can be used by organisations across the UK public sector including central government, local government, health, education, devolved administrations, emergency services, defence and not-for-profit organisations.

The UK Government G-Cloud 11 is an initiative focused on facilitating procurement by public-sector bodies. By making it easier for public sector organisations to procure solutions without having to go through a typically lengthy tender process (G-Cloud 11 is OJEU compliant and it can take as little as a few days to start working with a partner as the provider has already been through a lengthy and rigorous tender and award process), G-Cloud 11 is fundamentally changing the way the UK Government accesses internet and "Cloud" based services.

Getting organisations to work smarter by streamlining processes by using cost effective technology is at the heart of Docuflow's business.

Chris Rowlands, Director at Docuflow said: "We have been helping UK organisations for a number of years now to reduce their reliance on printed documents and laborious associated processes which paper documents can generate which in turn can have a negative impact upon their organisation.

"We have taken numerous enquiries from government departments about our hosted software solutions. There is now a serious push and drive to become "Paper Lite" within Government which is when we decided it was the right time to dedicate resources into becoming a recognised partner to the UK Government for digital transformation requirements and projects."

Chris added: "We are delighted to have been appointed to the framework which recognises Docuflow as a UK Government software solutions partner. We look forward to delivering innovative cloud-based software and lead the way to a digital and sustainable future."
